Tazz letter to the world

So, This is Tazz Anderson. I don't know if anyone can hear. It doesn't really matter. I'm sending you this message. It's like..my letter to the world.

Hi Mum and Dad. And Ed. Hi all.

This is for you. Maybe you won't get it quite as we planned but...I just wanted to record this..... even if things don't work out.

a few hours yet to destination Earth. Whatever happens, I want you to know that I have enjoyed every minute of this mission and the training and, Ed, don't stop aiming high. Always believe that anything is possible. Believe that, Ed.

I was going well until we hit the meteor storm. Or it may have been Space debris. There's a lot of it, they say; bits of machinery and junk from previous space flights. Like dropping litter on Earth. Except this stuff is potentially deadly to a small ship like mine. I may never discover what it was that hit, 3 hours ago. It certainly might explain the other failed missions.

Hi Puzzle. I've only had you a year but you have really changed my life. You're so friendly and so warm to hug. I'm thinking about all my favourite places to walk in and explore with you and there are so many on my to-do list.

I'm ready for what happens next.

And mum and dad, I'm glad you pushed me. All my loves to you. Hug Puzzle for me. Keep her safe.

I'm coming home.

Tazz.

I'm shaking.

Keep positive. There's no more I can do. I'm putting my suit on.
